

NOVEMBER HEAVENS BRIGHT IN EAST

Three Brilliant Comets Not Far From Earth; Double Stars and Nebulas Are to Be Seen in Sky This Month.

No one who is interested in watching the face of the heavens can have failed to notice how the eastern sky has been continually growing more brilliant as the bright winter groups make their appearance and begin their steady upward march, one after another. The magnificent Taurus is now high up from the ground and covers a large part of the eastern heavens, while below this the almost equally brilliant Gemini and Orion have almost wholly entered the evening sky. Next month the bright Double Stars will appear, and by January we will see Leo, the last of the train of winter groups. Then Orion and the Bull will shine out, high up in the cold, clear sky exactly in the south, and the yellow Capella will have reached a point of the heavens almost exactly overhead.

Double Stars and Nebulas.

The faint star groups bring to the southeast of Andromeda above the large group of Andromeda above the almost equally large, but much fainter Pheasants, below them, still further down, are the Whale, the Water-beaver, and the Southern Fish, this whole region being given up to watery constellations and sometimes known as

The Planets.

Mercury passed into the evening sky on Oct. 23, but as it does not reach its greatest distance east of the sun until Dec. 7, it can hardly be detected during this month.

Venus is drawing rapidly out from the sun into the morning sky, and on November 26 it will reach its greatest distance west, on which date it will rise more than three hours before sunrise. It now shines out no less brilliantly in the morning than a few weeks ago. It was seen to shine in the evening sky. In the telescope it will be seen to change from a crescent shape to a half circle during this month.

Mars and Saturn are high up from the ground in the southeast, in excellent position for observation. The strikingly bright red planet is moving westward through Taurus, and the more distant Saturn is moving far more slowly westward near the eastern border of Aries. The former planet attains its nearest distance to us on November 12, at 8 a. m., at which time it is but 47,000,000 miles away. It will not, however, arrive at the point of the celestial spheres exactly opposite the sun, and so be due south at midnight until November 24. Throughout this month both Mars and Saturn will be in the most favorable position for observation of the entire year.

Jupiter, which has been drawing so near the sun that it has not been visible for several weeks, will finally pass behind that body and enter the morning sky on November 18. It cannot, therefore, be observed during this month.

Uranus is very low in the southwest. Neptune is in the constellation Gemini, nearly in a line with the two Twins, but beyond the borders of our chart and too low down to be easily found in the telescope before mid-night.

The Comets.

There are no less than three rather bright comets which have recently drawn near our sun, and are now not far from the earth. The first of these is the bright comet Brooks, which was conspicuous in the northwest during the first week of October, but which has now passed far below the equator, and will never be seen by us again. It is still visible to those so situated on the earth that they can view the southern sky.

The third comet is by far the brightest and most interesting of all, but unfortunately, it remains always so very near the sun that it could only be seen with difficulty. This was first seen in the northeastern sky about two hours before sunrise, a very little way to the east of the bright star Regulus. During October it passed east of the sun across the constellations Leo and Virgo. During November it will be more southward across Libra and throughout the entire length of Scorpio, reaching a point 20 degrees below the equator by the end of the month. Thus, while it may be detected toward the beginning of this month very low down in the twilight glow in the southwest, just after sunset, it will always be too near the sun to be well seen. As long as it remains in our northern sky it will be fully a whole magnitude brighter than Brooks' comet, but it will only be found with difficulty on account of its proximity to the sun.

NEW WAY TO DRESS "YALLER-LAIG" CHICKEN

Dressicks May Be Made as Tender as Choice Tid-Bits by Careful Manipulation in Cooking.

ANEX, N. M., Nov. 2.—A new poultry bulletin just issued by the Iowa agricultural experiment station provided a way around that perplexing old question, "light meat or dark?" that troubles the head of the house every time he serves chicken. It describes a way of dressing chickens so that light meat, dark meat and dressing, all three, may be sliced off at one stroke of the carving knife. Moreover it tells how to get rid of the troublesome tendons that get into the teeth when the drum stick is eaten.

The bulletin was written by William A. Lippincott, poultryman of the Iowa station. It explains every step fully and clearly and makes this new mode of chicken dressing thoroughly practical. Chickens dressed as it describes often bring as high as 50 cents per pound at retail.

A striking feature of the pamphlet is its illustration. The bulletin may be had free on application to the Iowa agricultural experiment station, Anex, Ia. Ask for Bulletin No. 125 on "Trussing and Boning Chicken for Fancy Trade."

TRANSCONTINENTAL WALKER ARRIVES IN THE CITY

New York Young Woman Making Trip Across Continent on Foot, Spends Night in Albuquerque.

"Hiking Nell," the New York woman who is walking from Gotham to Los Angeles on a $5,000 wager, spent Sunday night in Albuquerque, having tramped thus far across the continent and having a month's walking yet to do if she reaches the "City of Angels" in season to win the purse. This courageous pedestrian, known to the public as "Hiking Nell," is establishing a new record for feminine prowess and deserves unstinted praise and admiration for her soldierism.

The Young Woman's Christian association was the haven of refuge for the drenched, foot-sore and weary pilgrim last evening. A haven indeed did the Y. W. C. A. prove, for in the drizzling rain of the gloaming hour when she presented herself, she seemed an ideal subject for a hospital, being uniformly clad in worn out shoes, draggled skirts, wet to the knees, face pinched and peeled from exposure to the elements. However, a warm bath, nutritious supper, new clothing given by the sympathetic young ladies of the home, and a restful night made a new woman of the traveler who is beginning to test the strain of the ambitious undertaking. After a good breakfast this morning she went forth renewed in body and spirit, newly clad and determined to make twenty-five miles ere night fall. In the beginning of the journey she easily walked fifty miles a day but vigor was waning as traversing the mountainous country of the west saps strength, flesh and all reserve force save the valiant spirit of determination. This is the second attempt of "Hiking Nell" to walk across the country. The first essay, however, was interrupted in the early stage by an accident on the railroad that left her with a broken arm. Delicate of build, with noble features, slender hands, and typical piano fingers, which till the accident to her arm did duty at the piano, "Hiking Nell" bears the stamp of a gentlewoman who has steelied herself to accomplish the Herculean feat of tramping from New York to Los Angeles in six months. And, though worn by the long march she is undismayed but confident she will win the wager of $5,000 and lasting fame.

The tie of the Santa Fe serve as the path, which the traveler says is the nearest route to the coast. Not one moment is she allowed to ride on the train or even to have a lift in the road vehicles. And what makes thefeat seem more arduous yet, is the fact that she must make the entire journey without funds.

It is to be hoped that the end of the trip, when the grit is no longer necessary to keep the whip hand on the nerve, that endurance will not snap and leave "Hiking Nell" broken in health.

ORCHARD FIXTURES MANUFACTURED IN ROSWELL

Smokeless Orchard Heater and Other Patented Inventions to Be Product of Factory to Be Built in Apple Country.

ROSWELL, N. M., Nov. 4.—The statement that one industry encourages another, and brings greater prosperity to the prosperous community has again been substantiated in this city. On account of the success of the apple crop this year, another industry has been attracted to this section, and a large manufacturing plant will be built if the plans of capitalists interested in the project mature. Charles H. Whitman of Dexter is planning to move to Roswell where he Mr. Holt and Mr. M. M. Brunk will build a manufacturing plant not less than 55x100 feet supplied with modern machinery, to be run by electric ity, for the purpose of manufacturing the Holt Smokeless orchard heater, all kinds and sizes of orchard sprayers, apple picking machines, and all other orchard tools. A cement block industry will also be taken care of in connection. It is hoped to have this factory in running operation by January 1, but the plant in Dexter will not be dismantled until spring. Mr. Whitman has lately been disposing of a large number of tile to Roswell parties, and now has an order for 1,400 fourteen-inch tiles from Mr. Lewis, of that place, and he thinks it will be an advantage to all parties to move to Roswell on account of better facilities there for obtaining good sand to make this tile. In regard to the manufacture of orchard heaters, Mr. Hall, the inventor of the new feature in this line, is very enthusiastic, and has already booked orders for $3,000 of Artistic and Caribbean and 5,000 at Topeka, Kansas, with prospects for additional heavy orders. Mr. Hall has for some two months been trying to interest the Dexter people in building a factory here, but could not awaken interest and now Roswell only loses this opportunity for another factory, but also loses the only most important one she has. This is a setback for Dexter to let Roswell get this new factory for it is expected to employ at least 30 men the year round.

ARMY HAS FAITH IN THE MULE

JUNCTION CITY, Kans., Nov. 1.—The indications are that the army mule will hold his job for some time to come. Motor trucks have been under trial several years by the war department and while they have proven very satisfactory, the decisions have always been that the four footed, long eared power was the most dependable.

Charles Daly of the quartermaster's department at Washington, who has been here several days, gives as his opinion that the army mule is here to stay. He is on a tour of inspection through the west, relative to the transport question, and has investigated in many cities. He found that packing houses were using horses and mules in preference to gasoline trucks, and in places the more modern forms of conveyance had been replaced with horses. It was asserted that on crowded streets the cars could not make the time of horses.

In the 500-mile test march, just completed, two trucks were used to carry the camp equipment. They made good time, arriving in camp several hours ahead of the troops, and the wagon trains, but the roads in the main were very good. Just what the trucks will do on marches through rough country where there are no roads, has not been determined, but the army mule may rest content, secure in the fact that he will hold his prominent place in forces of Uncle Sam for some years to come.

sirloin," and several other steaks with high-sounding titles.

But all of the steaks masquerading under new names cost more. The advance in price ranges anywhere from 10 to 25 cents. In the lunch counter restaurants where the "small steak" formerly sold for 15 cents, its present day counterpart costs a quarter. In the more pretentious places where the old "small steak" sold for as much as 60 cents, it is now known as a "single sirloin" and the price is from 75 to 90 cents.
